Dr. Allison M. Stagg is an art historian of early American art and visual culture. She is currently preparing for publication a book on the history of late 18th and early 19th century American political caricatures. Her research has been supported by funding institutions in the United States, England, Germany, and France; most recently from the Gerda Henkel Stiftung in Germany, the Paul Mellon Centre for British Art in London, and the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. Other projects include organizing an exhibition on British and American caricature prints in collaboration with Yale University and the American Antiquarian Society, and will open at the Wilhelm Busch Museum in Hannover in 2020.
