

Chandrasekhar Venkataraman

Modelling cell motility with the evolving surface finite element method

We investigate a model for cell motility and chemotaxis. Our model consists of a partial differential equation posed on the cell membrane that models cell polarisation coupled to a geometric evolution equation for the membrane position. We derive a numerical method based on surface finite elements for the approximation of the model and we present numerical simulations of the migration of two and three dimensional cells.