Central teaching content:
The objective of this course is to explain, characterize and analyze the concept of Integrated Reporting (IR), which has the potential to become the future main stream of business reporting. The course will cover the conceptual background of this reporting stream, the Framework published by the International Integrated Reporting Council (IIRC), and the practical experiences that have been gathered so far. To understand the concept of IR the course discusses the proposed content, principles, and elements of IR. The students should understand that the concept goes beyond reporting and impacts corporate business models and the way management thinks and makes decisions.
