Study European and International Law as part of your German legal studies!

Discover how human rights are protected in Europe and beyond and which rules apply to the interaction of sovereign States!

As of 2019, all major courses of European and International Law are taught in English. Take the opportunity to improve your legal English within your German legal studies! In some courses you can obtain the legal foreign language certificate required for your State Examination.

School English is a good basis for starting European and International Law. English course materials, specific glossaries and further readings in both languages will help you to feel at ease. Whereas major courses are taught in English, you can take all examinations (seminars, Studienarbeit, oral) in German. An optional tutorial further trains you to switch from German to English and vice versa while discussing questions.

Core Courses of European and International Law

While you may follow the Law of International Relations right from the first semester, you should attend most courses during the 5th or 6th semester in order to have enough time afterwards to prepare your State Examination.

Europäische Rechtsvereinheitlichung

2 hpw

This overview of the techniques of European legal harmonization and unification gives you a better understanding of how EU law works. The course complements your studies of European and International Law (in German).

Methodenlehre + tutorial

1 + 1 hpw

Acquire the general skills for discussing legal problems and writing a seminar thesis. Get familiar with Continental European legal methods that underlie also the traditional international law of treaties (in German).

Tutorial: Völkerrecht in deutscher Sprache

1 hpw; optional

Practise how to switch from German to English and vice versa while discussing questions of European and International Law.

Two seminars of your own choice

2 + 2 hpw

Within seminars, you will have to write two short theses, and to present and discuss them with other students. The second thesis is the Studienarbeit, which is part of your Legal University Examination. A variety of seminars is offered, covering the different aspects of European and International Law. Seminars are normally held in German.
